Bork Retracts Previous Views On Free Speech and Sex Bias

By Stuart Taylor Jr.
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Judge Robert H. Bork has backed away from previous positions on key aspects of free speech and women's rights, insisting that he is not the extremist portrayed by opponents of his confirmation to the Supreme Court.

In testimony Wednesday, the second day of his confirmation hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Judge Bork said for the first time that he now approves of at least one Supreme Court decision he previously criticized: a 1988 ruling that protects some speech advocating unlawful or violent action. He also suggested for the first time that, under his interpretation, the U.S. Constitution's guarantee of equal protection might bar some forms of governmental sex discrimination.

In the past he has said repeatedly that this clause prohibits only racial, ethnic, and religious discrimination but not sexual discrimination.

While Judge Bork's testimony Wednesday, delivered in a relaxed, often genial tone, appeared to be aimed at reassuring senators who

Pentagon Report Cites Abuses Against Women

By Richard Halloran
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — In a scathing report on women in the military, Pentagon advisers have accused the U.S. Navy and Marine Corps of condoning sexual harassment, discrimination and "morally repugnant behavior" in the Pacific region.

Among the abuses cited in the report, submitted late last month to Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, were these cases:

- A navy ship captain who announced over the vessel's public address system that he was willing to "sell" female sailors to Koreans. He has been relieved of duty and the navy is investigating.
- Sexually oriented entertainment in base clubs in the Philippines.
- Senior men and women demanding sexual favors from junior women.
- Commanders who ignored complaints from enlisted women.
- Women not working in jobs for which they were trained and thus denied promotion.

[Reacting to the report, the Pentagon ordered an investigation Thursday into treatment of women in the armed services. Reuters reported from Washington.

"It is emphatically the Defense Department's policy that this kind of sexual harassment will not be tolerated," said David Armour, a deputy assistant secretary of defense. "It is a chain of command problem here and we will make needed changes in attitudes and promotion criteria where necessary."

[Regarding the navy captain's offer to "sell" female sailors, Mr. Armour said: "There has been a suggestion that this was a joke, but I have nothing further on this." He added that the officer might be court-martialed.]

U.S. Chooses Woman as New Envoy to Iraq

WASHINGTON — The White House has chosen April C. Glaspi as the first American woman to serve as an ambassador in the Arab world, appointing her to succeed David Newton in Iraq, Arab diplomatic sources said.

The sources said Wednesday that Ms. Glaspi, director of the State Department's regional desk responsible for Lebanon, Jordan and Syria, was notified by the White House of her selection early this week and had yet to receive Baghdad's agreement. Iraq is expected to accept her appointment, they said.

Iraq is one of very few Arab or Moslem countries that the United States regards as amenable to accepting a female ambassador. Most others would likely refuse such a choice because of Islamic traditions that do not favor women playing prominent roles.

Although Islam is the religion of more than 90 percent of Iraq, the nation prides itself on its secular, socialist ideology emphasizing the strict separation of religion and state.

Ms. Glaspi, who has served as a political officer in Lebanon, Kuwait, Egypt and Syria, is regarded as one of the State Department's top Arab-world specialists.

Ex-Radio Martí Reporter Charges Station Is Used to Gather Intelligence

By George Volsky
New York Times Service

MIAMI — A former employee of Radio Martí, a branch of the Voice of America broadcasting exclusively to Cuba, has charged that the organization was using its staff to gather intelligence rather than convey information.

The former employee, Hilda Inclan, who said she resigned as the station's Miami bureau chief this month, said Wednesday that she had been "forced to instruct my reporters to do intelligence gathering rather than being simply reporters."

Ms. Inclan's charges were denied by Michael W. McGuire, spokesman for the Voice of America, which is responsible for Radio Martí's programming. "What Ms. Inclan says about Radio Martí's intelligence gathering is completely false," he said.

Mr. McGuire indicated that what Ms. Inclan called "intelligence gathering" was really research about conditions inside Cuba. He said that two of the most successful programs beamed to Cuba, one on AIDS and the other on housing conditions on the island, were the result of both research and reporting.

Authorized by Congress in 1983 after a heated debate, Radio Martí began broadcasting in May 1985.

Ms. Inclan said that after April she noted that interviews by her reporters with Cuban refugees arriving by boats in Miami were not put on the air. When she complained to Radio Martí's director, Ernesto Betancourt, he replied that some refugees "have been shown to be Castro infiltrators," she said.

In May, Mr. Betancourt, in a letter to Perry Rivkin, director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Miami, said that "the only person authorized by Radio Martí to interview" newly arrived Cuban refugees was Tony Rivera, chief of the station's research operations in Miami, because "the arrival of raft people from Cuba is no longer newsworthy."

Ms. Inclan said that Mr. Rivera was "neither a reporter nor an editor" and that, according to Radio Martí's guidelines, its Department of Research and Policy, which she

Managua May Reopen a Daily Sandinists Also Called Ready to Talk to Rebel Officers

MANAGUA — A top Sandinist official says that the Nicaraguan government is likely to reopen La Prensa, the opposition daily, without censorship and that it is willing to talk with rebel field commanders to discuss details of a cease-fire to begin Nov. 7.

Meeting Wednesday with foreign reporters, Commander Luis Carrizosa, the deputy interior minister, added his comments to those of other Sandinist leaders who recently reaffirmed their commitment to comply with a peace plan signed in Guatemala on Aug. 7 by the five Central American presidents.

Nicaragua's President, Daniel Ortega Saavedra, in an address Tuesday to the Central American ambassadors in Managua, said his government would meet the terms of the accord even if Washington

U.S. House Leaders Agree On Plan to Send Contras Nonmilitary Assistance

By Neil A. Lewis
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Democratic and Republican leaders in the U.S. House of Representatives have worked out an agreement to continue nonmilitary aid for the Nicaraguan rebels on a temporary basis, the Speaker of the House, Jim Wright of Texas, said Thursday.

Under the compromise between Mr. Wright and the Republican leader in the House, Robert H. Michel of Illinois, the House will consider approving nonmilitary aid for the rebels for a 40-day period beginning Oct. 1.

Mr. Michel had initially proposed providing the rebels, who are known as contras, with aid that could be used for both military and nonmilitary purposes. The White House was quick to announce its support for this plan, which would have provided about $9 million for the contras.

But after Mr. Wright objected and warned that the plan would be defeated, the two worked on a compromise, which would give the contras about a third of that for the 40-day period. The amount, which was still being discussed, would probably be $2.5 million to $4 million.

The Republican effort to provide new aid for the contras is the latest episode in the battle between the Reagan administration and Democrats in Congress over the issue of whether to provide new aid for the contras while five Central American countries — Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Honduras, El Salvador and Guatemala — are negotiating over how to put a peace plan for the region into effect.

Last year, Congress approved $100 million in military and nonmilitary aid for the rebels, but the authority to spend that money expires at the end of this month, when the current fiscal year ends. President Ronald Reagan has said he will ask Congress for $270 million in aid for the contras for the next 18 months, but administration officials have not specified when they would submit that request.

Highest-Ranking Black At State Dept. Resigns

By John M. Goshko
and Phil McCombs
Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON — Alan L. Keyes, the highest-ranking black in the State Department, has submitted his resignation after charging that he was treated in a racist manner by Deputy Secretary John C. Whitehead, according to State Department officials.

Mr. Keyes is a political appointee who had been serving as assistant secretary for international organization affairs, the office that deals with the United Nations.

His resignation was tendered after Mr. Whitehead, at a meeting Sept. 11, overruled Mr. Keyes in a dispute about the distribution of U.S. financial contributions to UN agencies. The officials said Mr. Keyes complained afterward that Mr. Whitehead had talked past him to his subordinates in a manner that he regarded as a racial snub.

[Mr. Whitehead on Thursday accused Mr. Keyes of showing "contempt for the taxpayers' money," but he said reports that he was quitting because of a racist snub were overblown, The Associated Press reported.]

Warsaw Pact Observers Watch French Exercises

ROUEN, France — Fourteen Warsaw pact observers are watching maneuvers by 25,000 troops in northwestern France for the first time under an international agreement on large-scale exercises, military sources here said.

Among the terms of the accord, signatories of the Stockholm accord last year agreed to invite foreign observers to any exercise involving more than 17,000 troops. The observers included two Russians, two Hungarians, two Czechoslovaks, two Romanians, two East Germans, two Poles and two Bulgarians.

rather minor administrative issue, and I think Alan is making a mountain out of a molehill. He has done a good job and we regret to see him go, but he has made his decision.

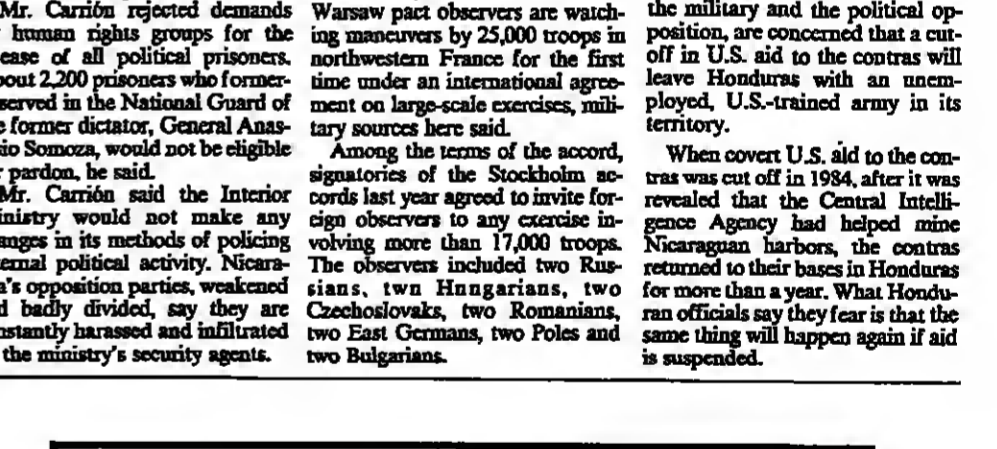

Mr. Keyes said he intended to accept a research and writing appointment at the American Enterprise Institute.

Mr. Keyes, formerly a member of the Foreign Service, has a reputation as an articulate and outspoken neoconservative who strongly supports President Ronald Reagan's foreign and domestic policies.

In addition to his duties involving the United Nations, Mr. Keyes sought repeatedly but unsuccessfully to have Mr. Shultz designate him as the principal spokesman for the Reagan administration's policy on South Africa.

Department officials said Mr. Keyes was frequently on the losing side of internal policy disputes.

Figurative Painting From London

■ "A School of London: Six Figurative Painters," at the Ca' Pesaro in Venice to Oct. 18, is intended to illustrate and vindicate the assertion of the American-born, London-based painter R.B. Kitaj, according to which "there are artistic personalities in this small island more unique and strong and I think numerous than anywhere in the world outside America's jolting vigor." The show, organized by the British Council and Michael Peppiatt, includes 67 works by Michael Andrews, Frank Auerbach, Francis Bacon, Lucian Freud, R.B. Kitaj and Leon Kossoff, predominantly devoted to the human figure, treated in a forceful and indeed frequently raw idiom. The exhibition will be at the Dörscheidt Kunstmuseum from Nov. 6 to Jan. 10. PARIS

An Italian Autumn

■ The arts in Italy are at the focal point of the vast program of this year's Festival d'Automne, which extends to the end of the year and beyond. The composer Luigi Nono is represented by six performances of the 1985 version of his "Prometeo" and three other concerts. Luca Ronconi's stagings of Goldoni's "La Serva Ammessa" (in Italian) and Shakespeare's "The Merchant of Venice" (for the Comédie-Française) are scheduled, as well as a workshop with actors of Rome's Accademia Nazionale d'Arte Drammatica and his film version of Ariosto's "Orlando Furioso." Goldoni's "La Locandiera" will be given in a French-language production by Alfredo Arias, and several Italian puppet theaters will be on hand. There is a retrospective of the films of Nanni Moretti, and exhibitions are devoted to the architect Renzo Piano and the artist Mario Merz. Major theater productions include Hans-Jürgen Syberberg's staging of Kleist's "Penthesilea" with Edith Clever, Robert Wilson's of Heiner Müller's "Hamletmaschine" and Patrice Chéreau's of Chekhov's "Platonov," and the Trisha Brown, Mommy-Durore and Stephen Petronio dance companies are on the agenda. Musical spectacles include Iannis Xenakis's "Tryptique," based on ancient Greek texts, and "Vals," by Tod Machover and Catherine Ikam, commissioned by IRCAM.

Puccini One-Acters

■ The Paris Opéra opens its season Sept. 28 at the Salle Favart by adding new productions of Puccini's "Il Tabarro" and "Suor Angelica" to its existing "Gianni Schicchi," presenting the composer's "Trittico" of one-acters complete in stagings by Jean-Louis Martinoty, with Marcello Panni conducting.

Steirischer Herbst at 20

■ The 20th Styrian Autumn festival, which concentrates on the contemporary arts and on the neighboring nations of Austria, Yugoslavia and Italy, has its usual variety. One theme is the animal as a conveyor and medium of art—objects, environments, live performances, video and photo documentation. The Graz Opera, in a co-production with the Vienna State Opera, gives the world premiere Sept. 26 of Friedrich Cerha's "Der Zisterzienser" (The Fled Piper), based on Carl Zuckmayer's play. The Vienna Tanztheater presents two choreographies by Liz King, "Winterreise" and "The Cardinal's Cry." Trigon, the Three Nations Biennale, presents the work of artists from eight countries under the title "Transitions." The Youth Music Festival in Deutschlandsberg has Hans Werner Henze as artistic adviser, and events include his musical fairy-tale spectacle "Pollicino," staged by Ian Stratford. The programs of the Musikprotokoll have the usual dense programming of new music as well as a celebration of the centenary of Hector Villa-Lobos. And much more; from Sept. 19 to Nov. 8.

Moscow's Remarkable Chagall Show

A Rich Collection of Works, Many From Soviet Sources, Give Broad View of the Artist

by John Russell

MOSCOW — In the first week of September the bloom went off the Moscow summer, and in the streets adjacent to the Pushkin Museum amber lamplight shone behind tall windows set in pale yellow facades. The morning was dark and dank, but people were standing five and six abreast in a line that snaked around the museum for more than 100 yards. In an exhibition mounted in short order to mark the centenary of his birth, Marc Chagall's work was back in town and in bulk after many, many years, and no one in Moscow was put off by the weather.

Once inside, Soviet visitors wheeled this way and that in wordless absorption, leaving it to a large foreign contingent to circle the hours away. With 254 items—paintings, etchings and lithographs—in the catalogue, there was a lot to take in. Many of Chagall's early paintings had a direct, factual, unselfish quality that came across in a candid, unmediated way. Here and there, there was fantasy. A little town in nowhere became the locus of mysterious, implausible and unprecedented goings-on. But, even then, Chagall dished up the facts of provincial life in a way that is still valid today. Chagall, a native of Vitebsk, went to Paris in 1911, returned to Russia soon after the outbreak of World War I and remained there throughout the first years of the revolution. Despite his initial readiness to help build a new society, he was disenchanted and left the Soviet Union permanently for the West in 1922.

Thanks to careful editing, the exhibition contained very few of the paintings in which Chagall sometimes let sweet sentiment carry him away. The 51 etchings made in Paris for Gogol's novel "Dead Souls," dated 1923-27, make an exhibition in themselves, with the kind of bite, snap and concision that calls for long and close looking. In the coverage of the period from 1906 to 1922 there was a memorably strong, lean and unbacked contribution from Soviet sources, both public and private.

First mooted in 1973, the exhibition had the support of Chagall's second wife, Vava, and of his daughter by his first marriage, Ida. (Both of them live in France.) Thanks to the informed and effusive enthusiasm of Irina Antonova, the director of the Pushkin Museum, and to rapid and extensive fieldwork by the poet Andrei Voznesenskiy, the exhibition was put together in a spirit of jubilation—though not, it may be surmised, without opposition from some who thought that the Soviet Union would have done better to leave the centenary unmarked.

Some 50 paintings, most of them from the artist's later years, were lent by Vava Chagall, and a smaller but especially cogent group was lent by Ida Chagall. Everything else in the show, including the entire graphic representation, came from Soviet sources. Nearly 30 paintings of real importance, dated between 1906 and 1925, had been lent not only by the Tretyakov Gallery in Moscow and the Russian Museum in Leningrad but by museums in Pskov, Bialystok (Poland), Yerevan and elsewhere, not to mention the private collectors whose continued existence often surprises the foreign visitor.

Without having seen the large and all-but-monochromatic "Self-Portrait with Muse" of 1917-18, we cannot truly estimate either the enduring impact of Paris upon Chagall before 1914 or the agility with which he could depart entirely by foreign means the idiom that we recognize as Chagalque. Even the gamut of tone, which went from white through gray to palest moon-blue, has no equivalent in Chagall's work.

As for the Tretyakov Gallery's "Wedding" of 1918, it too could be called a revisionist masterpiece. It is painted almost entirely in blacks and whites—black suit for the bridegroom, white dress and white veil for the bride, black house and black fence and a black-suited Jewish fiddler. Inside the house, we glimpse a table set for feasting, and down from the sky there swoops a guardian angel with big cherry-red wings to bless the union. This painting alone would have made Chagall's reputation.

WE realize that "Wedding" draws upon his experience of Vitebsk. "A place apart from all others," he once called it. "A singular, unhappy and tedious town. There were synagogues by the dozen—no, by the hundred. Also butchers' shops, and passers-by." He had grown up in Vitebsk at a time when to be a Jew there was to be a tethered man, with none of the mobility, social and geographical, that was the birthright of the gentile before 1914.

The Jew in Vitebsk lived in a society that denied him certain fundamental rights. Chagall dealt with that in his art by positing a state of affairs in which the Jew had supernatural powers. Imagination was his revenge. He could float high and free above the rooftops with his beloved in his arms. He could cross the town—or the whole world—in one colossal stride. And he could make life dance to the tunes that he drew from his great violin. In all this, he held tight to the objective realities of life in Vitebsk, as if by doing so he could remake them to his better.

In many other countries, such a painter would be honored in such a town. Streets would be named after him, and above all a museum. But it emerged during work on the Chagall centenary exhibition in Moscow that nothing of the kind was likely to happen in Vitebsk. Speeches were made in Byelorussia, and articles written and published, to protest the identification of Vitebsk with someone who was both a Jew and a Zionist. Chagall may have been back at home in Moscow, but Vitebsk wanted no part of him.

It should be said that if Chagall left Russia in 1922 and never returned, except for a brief visit in 1973, it was not because he was expelled. It was because he realized that although he had been willing to help build a new society, both his fellow artists and the theater directors with whom he had hoped to work made it clear that they would just as soon see the back of him. And if his work, though carefully preserved in Soviet museums, was rarely if ever seen in their galleries, it was because it was thought to be effete, backward-looking, sometimes mystical and too often concerned with Jewish subject matter. To overcome this long and loathsome tradition and get so large a show hung in Moscow in Chagall's centenary year was as much a political achievement as an artistic one.

Fundamentally, Chagall was about as apolitical as a man can be. When he was living in Paris before World War I, a young Russian critic called A.V. Lunacharskiy came to his studio and criticized his work from a political point of view. Chagall said, "If your Karl Marx is so smart, why don't you summon him back from the dead and get him to answer your silly questions about my work?" He was left with a bad

The Milder Side of Mick Jagger

by Robert Palmer

NEW YORK — Two albums into his solo career, and with the Rolling Stones apparently on hold indefinitely, Mick Jagger was talking about the advantages, and drawbacks, of being part of a band.

"I wanted to keep the same core of musicians throughout the album," he said, referring to his new album, "Primitive Cool." "I switched keyboard players, and on some tracks that I wrote with Dave Stewart of Eurythmics, the two of us played rhythm guitars. But I tried to keep the basic group somewhat tighter, in order to get a consistent feel and establish a bit of an identity. I think I've moved away from the Rolling Stones sound on this record, but I hope I've retained some of the best parts of that sound."

The band heard on "Primitive Cool" isn't going to be mistaken for the Rolling Stones, not even with Jagger's unmistakable phrasing and vocal textures front and center. The drummer, Simon Phillips, and the formidable bassist, Doug Wimbish, celebrated for his work on Sugarhill Records rap classics like "The Message," and with the avant-funk trio Fat Comet, make a precise and versatile rhythm team, with a layered, wide-spectrum sound different from the scrappy, kinetic punch of the Stones. And rather than an integrated, raucous twin-guitar attack, there's precise, spiraling lead guitar, courtesy of Jeff Beck.

Apart from this basic band, there's considerable variation from song to song. The title tune, with its aerobic-sounding keyboard parts and deftly orchestrated guitar and keyboard counterpoint, is momentarily reminiscent of Steely Dan: "Fanny Doll" features Irish pipes and fiddle in a delicate acoustic arrangement. "On my first solo album, I basically wrote whatever first came to mind, and I wanted to make the songs more varied in mood, so they weren't all variations on the same style."

It sounds as if Jagger is having too much fun calling the shots to be thinking about further Rolling Stones projects. "Oh, no, my feeling is that I'd very much like to do more Stones projects," said Jagger. "It should happen; I don't see why not. I enjoy doing this, though. It's interesting creating your own vision, and creating your own way. With a band, it's a kind of a democratic thing, so there's a lot of compromising. The songs go through a lot of changes between the writing and the finished record. When it's your album, you can try something, and if it doesn't work, well, it's your fault. I like doing it both ways, really."

With the Rolling Stones, Jagger really was part of the band, especially on records. The Stones's tight, integrated textures encouraged him to push his vocals, punching out phrases to match the percussive bite of the rhythms, and roughening his timbre to blend

NYSE Dips, Erasing Early Gains

NEW YORK — Prices on the New York Stock Exchange drifted mostly lower in moderate trading Thursday amid uncertainty over the direction of the dollar, interest rates and the impact of Friday's so-called triple-witching hour.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed at 2,577.90, off 2.29 points. During the session it was up as much as 10 points and, an hour before the close, down as many as 15.

Losing issues outnumbered gainers 4-3. Volume was 150.7 million shares, down from 195.7 million in the previous session.

Stocks opened higher, aided by a firm dollar, rising bond prices and futures-linked buying. Gains faded quickly, but by mid-morning the Dow was once again in positive territory, where it stayed until mid-afternoon.

NYSE Dips, Erasing Early Gains

They remain concerned about the direction of interest rates.

"Most money managers have pretty good results, and they're not interested in wasting that by making mistakes in the last week or two weeks of the quarter," Mr. Doran said.

Citicorp was the most active NYSE-listed issue, slipping 1/4 to 57 1/2. The company is offering 20 million shares at $84.

AT&T followed, rising 1/4 to 31 1/4. IBM was third, climbing 1/4 to 157 1/4. Ford rose 1/4 to 104 1/4. It reached a tentative contract settlement with the United Auto Workers. General Motors eased 1/4 to 87 1/4 and Chrysler rose 1/4 to 43 1/4.

NYSE Dips, Erasing Early Gains

Brookway climbed 1/4 to 58 1/4. The glass and plastic container company said it was in talks with Owens-Illinois to be acquired for about $60 a share.

G. Heileman Brewing rose 1/4 to 41 1/4. The company said its board unanimously agreed that the $38-a-share unsolicited tender offer began Sept. 4 by a Board Corporation Holdings subsidiary was inadequate and advised shareholders not to tender their stock.

Dayton Hudson rose 1/4 to 52 1/4. After the market closed, Dart Group Corp. said it proposed a friendly merger with Dayton Hudson that would involve payment of $65 a share in cash for 95 percent of the Dayton Hudson shares outstanding that Dart Group does not already own plus an equity interest in the newly formed company.

Hospital Corp. of America slipped 1/4 to 44 1/4 in active trading. The company said it plans a cash self-tender offer for 12 million of its shares.

NYSE Dips, Erasing Early Gains

Traders said that investors remained cautious before Friday's triple-witching hour, which involves the simultaneous expirations of stock index futures contracts, options on those contracts and options on individual stocks. The quarterly phenomenon has been linked with volatile, though short-lived, market swings.

"We're all waiting for the three witches Friday, and after that, this market is going higher," said one trader.

"People are very cautious, waiting for tomorrow to be over with," said Ron Doran, head of institutional trading for First Albany Corp. in Albany, N.Y.

Mr. Doran said that investors feel there is value in large-capitalization stocks, but that

British Unemployment Falls to 10.2 Percent

The Associated Press

LONDON — Britain's unemployment rate fell to a seasonally adjusted 10.2 percent of the work force in August from 10.4 percent in July, the Department of Employment said Thursday.

The August figure was down from 11.6 percent in August 1986. July's unemployment rate was revised to 10.5 percent.

Total seasonally adjusted unemployment was estimated at 2.83 million people, down from a revised 2.88 million people in July and 3.21 million people a year ago.

European Court Rebuffs France on Auto Tax. LUXEMBOURG — The European Court of Justice has ruled that France's road tax system discriminates against powerful cars imported from other European Community countries and must be changed. The court has been told that, while owners of top French cars paid 1,729 francs ($286 currently) under the system in 1985, people driving some foreign cars were charged 8,758 francs. This was because of a graded scale of payments that rises steeply for vehicles of above average horsepower. France has already modified the system once at the insistence of the court. In 1985, it replaced an arrangement under which cars with engines of more than 3.1 liters displacement, the size of the biggest French-made engines, faced a major surcharge. But the Court has now ruled that even the present sliding scale of payments is unfair to several car makers in other EC states.

Dollar Little Changed in Dull Trade

NEW YORK — The dollar closed little changed Thursday in New York as investors searched for clues to the currency's inclination. Trading was quiet.

Banker Urges Stronger Role For ECU, Yen

STRASBOURG, France — A Japanese banker has said that the dollar standard is breaking down and that the Japanese yen and the European currency unit should be upgraded to the status of the dollar in the international financial system.

Speaking to members of the European Parliament, Yusuke Kashiwagi, chairman of Bank of Tokyo Ltd., said Wednesday that industrial economies should prepare rapidly for the possible collapse of the dollar.

tenure and felt that it was too early to draw conclusions about it. Greenspan's most obsessive urge to learn every fact and meet every colleague took him over the Labor Day weekend to a meeting of the Bank for International Settlements — the central bankers' central bank — in Basel, Switzerland, and last week to Jacksonville, Florida, where he helped dedicate a new Fed branch building and participated in a joint meeting of regional directors.

Some viewed the discount rate increase as Mr. Greenspan's response to a direct market challenge of the new man in the job.

Mr. Greenspan, a multimillionaire who was married briefly in his 20s, is paid the same $85,500 salary that Mr. Volcker received. He has moved into the Watergate complex in Washington, which is near the Fed headquarters, and is keeping his East Side apartment in Manhattan as well.

These late-summer days, the new chairman's goal is to get up to Federal Reserve speed as he marvels at the quantities of paper that he and his three secretaries must process and watches keenly as the secrets of monetary policy reveal themselves.

WASHINGTON — Loans by the World Bank to Third World countries may reach a record $19 billion this year, the World Bank said Thursday in its annual report.

Appeal to Aid Africans

Some 20 African nations have appealed to the World Bank for aid to help them cope with drought and economic hardship, the bank said Thursday.

Some viewed the discount rate increase as Mr. Greenspan's response to a direct market challenge of the new man in the job.

Mr. Greenspan thinks that the essence of the Fed's job is to study what markets do, not what market commentators say, and then separate those elements that are temporary and self-correcting from those that demand some policy response.

BOOK BRIEFS

THE AGE OF GRIEF. By Jane Smiley. Alfred A. Knopf, 201 East 50th Street, New York, N.Y. 10022.

"I am thirty-five years old," says the narrator in the title story of Jane Smiley's new collection, "and it seems to me that I have arrived at the age of grief. Others arrive there sooner. Almost no one arrives much later. I don't think it is years themselves, or the disintegration of the body. Most of our bodies are better taken care of and better-looking than ever. What it is, is what we know, now that in spite of ourselves we have stopped to think about it. It is not only that we know that love ends, children are stolen, parents die, that their lives have been meaningless. It is not only that we know that all the others are getting ready to sooner or later. It is more that the barriers between the circumstances of oneself and of the rest of the world have broken down, after all — after that school, all that care."

Dave, the 35-year-old man who speaks of an "age of grief," is himself trying to cope with a piece of knowledge that has ruptured the bright, cheerful fabric of family life that he has so carefully woven since college — knowledge that his wife no longer loves him, that she has fallen in love with another man. Kirby Christianson, the hero of "Long Distance," finds himself dwelling morbidly on highway horror stories and "the miles of slick and featureless landscape" as he must travel before reaching his brother's house for Christmas, only to face up to the fact that what he is really afraid is the realization that his life has taken its "final form."

Preparing breakfast before work; getting the children ready for school, driving to the summer house, staying up with a sick baby; watching television after dinner — those thoroughly familiar moments are captured by Smiley with such immediacy and precision that we are left with a sense of having participated in her characters' lives. BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott. EARLY in a bridge lifetime, players learn the general principles of discarding: keep your honor card guarded, discard useless small cards and try to maintain a length to match dummy. But slavish adherence to such guidelines can lead to disaster, and did on the diagrammed deal played in the recent Far East championships in Shanghai. It was reported by George Arnott of Singapore in the tournament's Daily Bulletin. The bidding was not given, but might well have followed the Gerber auction shown. South can count 12 tricks, and knows that the dummy will produce some minor honors that will offer a chance of a 13th.

West led the diamond six, and queen, king and ace were played. South thought he would have an easy time by establishing dummy's hearts, and again by taking the ace and king for a spade discard. When he ruffed the third round and uncovered the break, the easy grand slam suddenly became difficult. Changing course, he ran five trumps to reach this ending.

Gooden Shuts Out the Expos; Dykstra, Strawberry Homer

MONTREAL — Dwight Gooden still felt the effects of a head cold, only this time it didn't show. Last Saturday, the St. Louis Cardinals tagged Gooden for six runs and five hits in two innings to send him to his earliest exit in 120 career starts.

Silent Stadium

Real Madrid defeated Napoli, 2-0, in the first leg of their European Champions' Cup match Wednesday night, but none of its vast army of fans was there to see it. Because of crowd trouble at last season's semifinal against Bayern Munich, UEFA, soccer's governing body in Europe, ordered a two-match ban on Real's fans.

The Martians Are Here!

By Russell Baker
NEW YORK — As everybody now knows, the CBS television network went black for six minutes last Friday evening during a comtempers between Dan Rather and the sports department about which came first, the tennis or the news. Millions were terrified. In some communities people ran into the streets screaming, "The Martians have landed!"

The Coming-of-Age of a Street Writer

By Bob Pfeiffer
WASHINGTON Post Service
NEW YORK — Inwood Hill Park, near the top of Manhattan, on a cloudy Sunday morning. Four neighborhood types, 18 to 21, lol on a bench drinking Budweiser beer out of paper bags, oblivious to the Sabbath. One guy, who sits up on the back about the rest, spouts Jim Carroll with an explosion of New Yorkese.

Jim Carroll: Poet and rocker.

because it was a book that wasn't looking back on childhood but was written at the time, so they say, the advances I was making as a writer within the book. They thought it was terrific to be able to gauge this progress.
At the same time, though, I get kids waiting for me back by the stage door after a show, they come up to me to sign the book or something and then they whip out a bottle of Carbons (leaving fluid) and ask me if I want to go up on the roof and stuff it. That's the other side of the audience, kids, and it's the first book they've read since they had to do a book report on "The Count of Monte Cristo" in sixth grade. They think my life went into some kind of suspended animation after the last sentence of the book. Unfortunately, it didn't.

Sarah Has a Good Cry At Jeffrey Archer Play

Overcome by the death scene in a new play by the author Jeffrey Archer, Prince Andrew's wife, Sarah, sobbed for 15 minutes at a London charity gala and later told the cast: "You lot managed to ruin my mascara." The play, "Beyond Reasonable Doubt," got 10 curtain calls and Sarah, the Duchess of York, congratulated Archer, leading actor Wendy Craig and Frank Finlay and the cast. Craig says the wife of a lawyer (Finlay) who defends himself when accused of her murder. Archer won £500,000 ($800,000) libel damages in July over a newspaper story linking him with a prostitute. The previous October, he resigned his post as deputy chairman of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party amid press reports of the incident. His play, which he wrote after his resignation, was panned by the critics in its out-of-town trial.
